The Linguistic Diversity Fellowships for incoming MAFLT students are intended to encourage participation among language educators from the following groups:

- Teachers of Less-Commonly-Taught Languages, and/or
- Teachers of Heritage Language Learners, including indigenous languages of the U.S., and/or
- Teachers who identify as black, indigenous, or people of color (BIPOC) or who otherwise belong to an under-represented group among language instructors.

These groups are all under-represented in comparison with the demographics of potential language learners and the critical need for a more multilingual and interculturally competent society. If you believe that you should be considered for one of these fellowships, please use the space below to explain a) your relationship to or membership in one of the groups above, and b) how you see yourself contributing to diversity in the field of language teaching. Aim for about 100 words.
